From Kaliningrad to Sakhalin, the Universal Database of Russian Regional Newspapers (UDB-REG) gives researchers access to in-depth coverage of developments taking place at Russia's regional and local levels.

Newspapers covered in UDB-REG are those with the largest circulation in their regions and considered the most authoritative. Currently, UDB-REG contains 112 newspaper titles from 54 Russian regions of the Russian Federation, as well as newspapers covering local issues of Moscow and St. Petersburg. Some newspapers of note include:

- The troubled Northern Caucasus (Groznenskii rabochii from Chechnya, Severnaia Osetiia from Northern Osetiia-Alania)
- Oil & gas rich Western Siberia (Tiumenskie izvestiia)
- The investment-friendly Volga region (Nizhegorodskie novosti from Nizhnii Novgorod or Samarskie izvestiia from Samara).

Researchers can use this database to quickly access local news, trace local reactions to national and international events, gauge ethnic relations, or assess issues concerning freedom of the press. Many resources go back to 2000, with a few going back to 1997.

Through our exclusive agreements, a number of the publications found on East View's site appear before the print version is available. The content is 100% complete and unabridged in full text, with every table, graph and chart included as images. There are no excerpts or
