OVERVIEW AND BACKGROUND

The Directorate of Statistics and Census of Panama carried out the 1990 National Censuses on May 13, 1990. The total population enumerated in this de facto census was 2,329,329. The figure represented a 29 percent increase from the 1980 census, compared to a 26 percent increase during the previous intercensal period. The census revealed the largest increase in the number of populated places in three decades. Unlike in the 1980 census, the 1990 census captured the entire indigenous population irrespective of region of residence.
